Keywords:Method, Stand up, Open your book, Task-Based Learning.

Total Physical Response

Total Physical Response, also called TPR, is a method that follows ‘learning by doing. For example, the new learner will learn English through a series of activities, “Close the door”, “Stand up”, “Open your book”, and “Stroll to the window and open it.” With TPR, the most significant aptitude is aural perception, and everything else will be regular.

The majority of class time in TPR lessons is spent doing drills in which the instructor gives commands using the imperative mood. Students respond to these commands with physical actions. In the beginning, students learn the meaning of the commands they listen to by direct observation. After they learn the meaning of the words in these commands, the teacher provides a command that uses novel combinations of the words the students have learned.

Community Language Learning

Community language learning is a language-teaching process in which students cooperate to create what portion of a language they might want to learn. It depends on the Understanding.

CLL is most likely one of the English teaching methods where the student feels the most secure. There's an extraordinary accentuation on the relationship and bond between the student and teacher.

Communicative Language Teaching

The thought behind this method is to help students convey all the more successfully and effectively in a sensible situation they may wind up in. So, this teaching includes focusing on essential capacities like thanking, complaining, suggesting, inviting, and requesting directions to give some examples.

There are some learning and teaching techniques that can be used in Communicative Language Teaching class, for example, role play, information gap, language exchanges, simulation, discussion, games, pair work, and group work. All these techniques can engage the learners in the communication process.

The Communicative Language Teaching approach focuses on giving students the skills to clearly and confidently communicate in real-world situations with native speakers of their target language.

It is an approach for second and foreign language teaching which mainly focuses on developing communicative competence. This approach emphasizes the use of language for meaningful purposes in authentic situations.

Task-Based Learning

Task-based language teaching is also called task-based instruction. The motive of this way to deal with learning is task finishing. Typically, the teacher sets relevant and exciting tasks. Then, students are required to complete their tasks in English to finish the job with as few mistakes as expected. Such assignments can incorporate visiting a specialist, directing a meeting, or calling customer care for help.

Task-based learning is a way of language learning where learners are given interactive tasks to complete. In order to do this, they need to communicate. Once the task is complete, then the teacher discusses the language used.

The Silent Way

The Silent Way is a language-teaching method created by Caleb Gattegno that makes immense use of silence as a teaching technique. The method emphasizes the autonomy of the learner; the teacher's role is to monitor the students' efforts, and the students are encouraged to have an active role in learning the language.

Pronunciation is seen as fundamental; beginning students start their study with pronunciation, and much time is spent practicing it each lesson. The teacher demonstrates only as a facilitator attempting to urge students to be more efficient in their learning.

Like Suggestopedia, the Silent Way faced lots of criticism. In one sense, the Silent Way was too harsh a method, and the teacher too distant, to encourage a communicative atmosphere. Students required more guidance and overcorrection than the Silent Way permitted. Teachers had to resist their instinct to spell everything out in black and white, to come to the aid of students at the slightest downfall.

Lexical Approach

The Lexical approach depends on computer studies with the most customarily utilized words. This approach in teaching centers around vocabulary securing and teaching lexical lumps arranged by their recurrence and use. Teachers of the Lexical Approach place an extraordinary accentuation on bona fide materials and practical situations for increasingly important learning.

Fluency does not depend on a set of generative grammar rules and a separate store of isolated words but on the ability to rapidly access this inventory of chunks. These chunks occupy a crucial role in facilitating language production and are the key to fluency. Two points to remember about lexical chunks: learners are able to:

- comprehend lexical phrases as unanalyzed wholes or chunks.
- use whole phrases without understanding their constituent parts.
