Abstract:In this article, the correct monitoring of inter-ethnic relations requires conducting policy taking into account the national interests of each nation and people, their desires and aspirations. Today, this is more relevant than ever. It is emphasized that the current problems in inter-ethnic relations are related in many ways to insufficient assessment of real social processes.

INTRODUCTION:The national issue, the issue of inter-ethnic relations has become one of the most important issues in the current stage of reconstruction. The work done by the Party and the Soviet state in the field of national issues, especially the historical values of strengthening the friendship of the peoples of our boundless Motherland, has weakened somewhat in the following years. In this situation, even in the first years of reconstruction, the problems awaiting their solution in the field of the development of nations and their mutual relations remained unsolved.

MATERIALS AND METHODS:As a result, a number of events occurred and are still ongoing, which worried the people of our entire country: the events of Alma-Ota, which took place on December 17-18, 1986, brought the Crimean Tatar people to return to their homeland, which has been going on for several years. the ongoing legal mass movement, ongoing disputes between the Armenian and Azerbaijani peoples over the Nagorno-Karabakh region, disagreements in the Baltic republics, Ukraine, Belarus, Moldavia, Georgia and other republics, conflicts in Fergana and Osh and others [1].

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION:But this does not lead to the conclusion that theoretical and scientific consciousness has been formed in the nations. At this time, the danger of chauvinists, nationalists and various extremists using the awareness of national identity was increasing. In such conditions, raising the consciousness of people has become the beginning and necessary condition of all work. Some people say that reconstruction is a temporary phenomenon and will not bring serious changes to society and people's lives, while others give in to rhetoric and call for leaping over the stages of socialist development and not discrediting the concept of reconstruction, while others renounce socialism and uphold the values of socialism. deny it, promote bourgeois liberalism and nationalism. Issues that seemed to have been resolved before have become relevant again. People are trying to better understand the essence of the changes that have begun in society, to understand what the essence and task of reconstruction is, what we are looking for, what goals we are trying to reach, what we understand by the new quality of the society we want to build.

First of all, we live in a multi-ethnic country, it is always necessary to take into account the impact of the ongoing changes on our country as a whole, on each republic, and on inter-ethnic relations. Focusing on the fact that solving any social, economic, cultural problems, issues of democracy and transparency concerns the interests of each people, each nation provides an opportunity to further strengthen the friendship of peoples [2].

Secondly, although up to this time, we had the opinion that the problem of the national issue had been resolved, the tensions in the field of national relations in the following years showed that this conclusion was unfounded. Problems in this field require careful study, calm expression of opinions, thoughtful conclusions, and timely and accurate decision-making. This requires a creative approach to the revolutionary theory, cleaning it of all dogmatism and schematism.

The events taking place in our country in recent years indicate that the national issue has become extremely acute. On the eve of the XIX All-Union Party Conference, and especially after it, political activity intensified in all republics, regions and regions of the country. Workers, hard-working peasants, intellectuals began to support the activities of the Communist Party and the Soviet state in the economic, political, national and cultural spheres, and fought for peace, friendship and cooperation in inter-ethnic relations. The Congress of People's Deputies of the USSR was established and at the congresses, national issues and the improvement of inter-ethnic relations were given special importance. But the right, principled way is still not being followed in the national issue. None of the political parties and mass movements (the number of which has now reached 700), which were formed to justify the people's trust and protect their interests, both in the center and in the national republics, did not go beyond their promises [3]. Among them, there are not a few ambitious, chauvinists, nationalists who fight for power, they have intensified chauvinism and nationalism in different cities and regions of our country, different countries, including the Baltics, Moldavia, Georgia, Armenia, Azerbaijan and others. In their republics, they are inciting indigenous peoples in those places against Russians and other peoples. Such forces are not absent in Uzbekistan. Such groups are trying to create various national disputes between the native population - Uzbeks and representatives of other nationalities in our republic. No matter how ineffective and useless their actions and attempts in this regard are, their aspirations are still undiminished. Those who are spreading various slanderous opinions without considering the independence of our republic and the peaceful work of our people are the same forces. They are ready to take any measures to preserve their position, to prevent the rise of the process of self-realization of the nations while reviving the false conclusions that prevailed until that time.

CONCLUSION: The main task of the day is to deal a sharp blow to any national discrimination, disregard for the interests of nations, any actions and attempts aimed at aggravating inter-ethnic relations.

Thus, the socio-economic and spiritual interests of people in our country are closely related to their ideological-theoretical preparation and political performances. People are not only able to eat and drink and live in comfortable houses, but also mature theoretical, political and social he should be rich with his spiritual level. The richer a person's inner world is, the richer his work and loyalty to the Motherland will be.
